

MONELL CENTER OPEN FACULTY POSITIONS 2022

Chemical Senses, Nutrition, Metabolism, or Disease Research

Position Description

The Monell Chemical Senses Center (www.monell.org) invites applications for multiple tenure-track faculty positions at junior and senior levels. The Monell Center is the world's premier institution devoted to research on the mechanisms and functions of taste, smell, and chemesthesis and their impact on health outcomes through their effects on eating behavior, nutrition, and metabolism.

We are committed to promoting a diverse and inclusive culture and offer competitive startup packages, an outstanding environment for scientific innovation and collaboration, and mentorship to new faculty.

We seek outstanding investigators at all academic levels (early-career to established investigators) interested in pursuing research aligned with our strategic aims.

Qualifications

Candidates must have a Ph.D., or M.D., or equivalent professional degree and postdoctoral experience. Senior-level applicants should have an established and funded research program with the potential for growth and collaboration. Junior candidates should have the potential to develop and fund an independent research program.

Applicants with diverse, underrepresented backgrounds are especially encouraged to apply. Monell is committed to enhancing our scientific enterprise through diversity and collaboration. We seek applicants representing a wide array of disciplines, backgrounds, and perspectives who are similarly committed to enhancing our diversity.
